The presidency is a powerful position, although Mr. Pertini's predecessors used their power cautiously. The president can dissolve Parliament and call new elections. He names premiers, subject to the approval of Parliament, and thus can influence the policies of the cabinet. As head of the armed forces, be controls the army and the Carabinieri, the country's most ef-fective police force, and thus has a key responsibility in matters in-volving law and order.

Sharp Reversal

Mr. Pertini's election became certain Friday when the leaders of the governing Christian Democrat-ic Party, in a sharp reversal, decid-ed to throw the party's votes to him. During the preceding six days — ever since be was formally pro-posed by his Socialist Party — the Christian Democratic leaders had opposed him. The Communists bad dicated that they were willing to

The Christian Democrats and Communists together have 718 votes in Parliament - more than enough to elect any candidate, Mr. Pertini received 832 votes out of 995 cast in the 1,011-member Electoral Assembly, which consists of the members of parliament plus 58 egional representatives. He needed 506 votes to win.

Only 36 votes were cast for other candidates, none of whom were entered officially. There were 121

Moscow to Be Told

U.S. Wants Option For Mobile Missiles

By Richard Burr

WASHINGTON, July 9 (NYT) - The Carter administration, at a critical juncture of the Soviet-U.S. talks on limiting strategic arms, has decided to tell Moscow that under the proposed treaty now being discussed by the two sides, the United States must be permitted to deploy a new, mobile intercontinental ballistic missile in the 1980s. Officials said yesterday that this move might complicate the effort that senior officials have deter-mined that without making this point to Moscow, a finished agree-ment could not win approval of the

The officials said that in a Cabinet-level meeting last Wednesday, senior officials agreed on a new negotiating approach that would insure that under any new arms accord the United States would remain free to proceed with a Defense Department plan for moving missiles around a series of empty launching silos. The plan is designed to minimize the vulnerability of U.S. missiles to a possible first-strike attack.

Vance-Gromyko Meeting

According to the officials, Moscow is to be informed that nothing in the proposed arms treaty should be allowed to preclude the new missile-basing plan. They said that this message would be delivered by Sec-retary of State Cyrus Vance during talks later this week with the Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Geneva and that it would also be delivered through

The Vance-Gromyko meeting is viewed as crucial in determining whether a new agreement can be achieved this year, and every effort is being made to resolve the two or three issues still in dispute.

However, the administration has tentatively decided to raise the new question of mobile missile deployment, the officials said, because the Senate would be highly unlikely to approve an accord that appeared to close off this option. They added that Defense Secretary Harold Brown had insisted that an accord not rule out the Pentagon's plan, which calls for the deployment of 200 new missiles that would be moved randomly around 4,000 launching sites.

The idea would be to create, in effect, a "shell game" in which the Russians could not pinpoint U.S. missiles and would be deterred from undertaking a nuclear first

Still Undecided

While Mr. Brown and other Defense officials have not decided whether the system should be built, they are said to have argued in in-teragency sessions that an accord that ruled it out would come under strong criticism on Capitol Hill. The deployment of mobile missiles is forbidden in a three-year protocol being negotiated but not in the treaty, which would run until 1985 and limit the overall size of strategic forces. To ease the task of verifying compliance, the treaty would contain restrictions on new silos, a limitation that, according to Mr. Brown and others, could prevent the United States from putting the shell-game idea into effect. They have argued that rather than restrict silo numbers, the treaty should place limits only on mis-

Vance Assails Russia On Dissident Trials

By Robert G. Kaiser

WASHINGTON, July 9 (WP) ---Secretary of State Cyrus Vance yesterday condemned the Soviet Union's decision to put two prominent dissidents on trial this week as the Carter administration intensified its response to those trials.

Mr. Vance read a sternly worded statement before television cameras at the State Department warning that the proposed trials would "inevitably affect the climate of [Soviet-U.S.] relations and impose obsta-cles to the building of coopera-

Later a senior official disclosed that the United States was canceling a high-level science mission to Moscow later this month and was reviewing all its cooperative agree-ments with the Soviet Union. However, Mr. Vance said he would still go to Genevn Wednesnegotiate a sound SALT agreement because it is in our national interest and in the interest of world peace to do so," Mr. Vance said.

Letter for Brezhnev

Mr. Vance said he would raise the issue of the dissident trials with Mr. Gromyko. A State Department official added that Mr. Vance would give Mr. Gromyko a personal message on the trials from Presideni Carter to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev.

The same official, giving a back-ground briefing to reporters, said the United States had new information that the Soviet Union may do more this week than try Anatoli Shcharansky and Alexander Ginsburg, two prominent dissi-dents. • Raise fares by up to 5 or 10 percent, with the limit based on the amount of competition on the route affected. The more nonstop airlines serving a particular route, the more flexibility airlines on that route would have to raise their fares.

By vacating its previous requirement that the airlines charge identical fares for all routes of equal distance, the decision is expected to encourage airlines to lower fares on selected routes. The board's action also will forsake a policy mandating that first-class fares be set at a certain percentage higher than reg-

In order to encourage innovative fares, the board would require a competing airline to wait 45 days before putting a fare into effect and would not approve matching fares on

"short notice." The new fare policy would apply in the 48 configuous states.

The guerrilla leader, Sam Nujoma, has demanded basic revisions in the plan, which provides for the territory, also known as Namibia, to become an independent African state next year.

"There is no possibility that the South African government will even consider any amendment to the Western proposals," Foreign Minister Roelof Botha said in the statement. "Even should the West come with such amendments and I do not say that they have done so - I wish to state bere that there is no such possibility that it would be considered."

Yearning for Peace Fills Cairo's Teeming Street

By William E. Farrell

CAIRO, July 9 (NYT) — The cit-izens of Cairo and Alexandria, like their counterparts in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, want the peace that seemed so promising in November — the peace that has eluded so many for so long.

A city like Cairo cannot fairly be compared with a city like Jerusalem except to say that both are old, both are revered. Jerusalem is a village of 360,000 persons whose po-pulace could be fitted into any neighborhood in Cairo, a capital bursting at midday with more than double the population of Israel, which is 3.5 million.

The streets of this city sun a newcomer already reeling from the fierce summer sun. They are hroken and seething with stalled cars. Men work in blinding heat in oversized potholes stitching together frayed wires or repairing pipes. Everywhere repairs are being made. Everywhere there are people — some estimates say more than 9 million of them - picking their way over ruptured pavements, winding through seas of autos, careful nnt to trample on the laborers in the ditches.

Gritty Patina

Humanity surges on the broad avenues made narrow by the mass of flesh and the plague of automobiles. Narrow alleys and dark ar-cades are filled with human sounds. car sounds, animal brayings. In the late afternoon, the dust that blows in from the desert casts a patina over everything — buildings, peo-ple, vehicles — and creates a gauzy scrim through which the late sun-

The city is an overstuffed closet. It has had a physical breakdown. There are four times as many people as the place can hold. It is like an old man made to run the fourminute mile - it cannot be done.

A physical breakdown but not a nervous breakdown. The thing that startles after the initial impact of the physical disarray is the good spirit of the Cairenes. For one takes away not rancor about the city's sorry state, with its phones that are mere memories of communication and its persistent power failures, but pleasant afterthoughts about the people's good-natured durahility — the young couple eager enough that a visitor based in Israel have a good time to take him to an expensive seafood place along the languorous Nile that they can ill afford, or the student seeking similarities between the Egyptians and the Israelis who hlurts out, " Well, salaam and shalom are close in

There is humor in Israel, of course, but it tends not to dwell on self-abnegation. It is heavier, sometimes even harsh, perhaps reflecting the hypertension that pervades that small country encircled by hostility and determined to prevail despite the awesome numerical imhalance between Arabs and Jews.

There is magnificence in Cairo's elegant minarets and beautiful mosques. There is something awesome in its devotion to Islam, particularly when a clamorous city street on noon at Friday subsides ing Mecca, shoeless, praying on lit-tle mats. Is the strength to endure so much poverty and hardship with such grace and humor to be found in that humble and dignified act?

At night, especially if a hreeze brings balm, Cairo pulses with moviegoers, coffee drinkers, cou-ples strolling along the Nile in some of the patches of green parkland that bave not been given over to the insatiable demand for housing. Long after Jerusalem is bedded down, Cairo hums. Amazingly for a place of such poverty, mugging is rare and murder rarer.

In Alexandria, on a beach called Mismi and with few cognizant of that irony, thousands of vacationers are wedged together on the sand and poking through stuffed picnic hampers. It looks like the heaches of Tel Aviv. Even the noise level of speech is familiar.

The countryside is different in Israel, the rural vistas are filled with tractors and hothouses and elaborate sprinklers whirring away in automated isolation. In the Nile Delta, rich and verdant, the vistas are filled with laborers in the fields many of them mere babies and cows and water buffalo turning water wheels.

Quiet Criticism

At night, in dark hars over icy domestic beer, the educated Egyptians like to talk politics. While Mr. Sadat rules unilaterally, even some critics pay him his due. He can and is taken to task for his egocentricity, his many well-furbished retreats, his long, long speeches. While the Egyptian experiment in democracy does not extend these days to airing such mildly heretical views in a public way, say in the press, if accompanied by a promise of anonymity they can be savored over a beer along with talk of cor-ruption and hureaucratic idiocy.

In Israel one sees slogans on walls and critical posters put up by one political faction or another. Po-litical criticism is a leitmotif of daily life. Prime Minister Menachem Begin is not above being heckled and jeered and interrupted in orain Israel is a messier and rowdier affair than in Egypt — and more open. Similarly, the Israeli press is more rounded and contentious than that in Egypt.

Few are privy to Mr. Sadat's moves and thoughts until he unleashes them on his 40 million; fellow citizens. He keeps them guessing and likes to surprise them. and sometimes the rest of the world : as well. Most of his constituents are poor and hard-working, and what he says goes down well. He said he could make peace with Israel, so Egyptians ask why the Israelis have not responded with a grand gesture, too. The question is the same in both places: Will there be peace? The yearning is there in both. Can it be nurtured through and past the tortuous realities of diplomacy, politics, negotiations, international intrigues and the walls of enmity erected over three decades? Shalom

White Approval

White leaders, including traditional liberals, generally approved the decision as one that would permit affirmative action to continue at an effective level while outlawing the quota system.

In the middle, a broad range of leaders said they found the decision to be confusing, and they predicted a rash of new lawsuits and much litigation before its meaning would be clear. "I think it will be many years and a lot of litigation before we find out exactly what Bakke says," said William Johnson, chairman of the board of governors for the University of North Carolina, which recently reached a negotiated settlement with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for increasing minority enrollments at

Although the Bakke decision has no effect on that settlement, he said, disgruntled white applicants turned away in future years might well use it as a basis for suing the

Confusion Feared

William Holloway, vice-provost for minority affairs at Obio State University, said he feared that affirmative-action programs would be thrown into confusion. Struggle Predicted

"Legally, the Bakke decision represents the end of the period of the Second Reconstruction, and lays the predicate for another century of struggle around the issue of racial discrimination." Chicago's Rev. Jesse Jackson told the national conference of state legislators in Denver Thursday

Although leaders such as Vernon lordan, president of the National Urban League, viewed the decision as a "disappointment" that could be overcome, the more dire Jackson view was pervasive in many communities.

"The Bakke case does reflect the mood of the country," said Dr. Ar-thur Jefferson, superintendent of the Detroit Public schools. "I believe the United States is becoming regressive. There is a myth that minorities have made tremendous gains in the '60s and '70s and that everything is all right now.'

NEW DELHI, July 9 (AP) — Six members of a U.S. mountaineering expedition to Nanda Devi in the Indian Himalayas reached the top of the 25,645-foot peak, members of the team reported yesterday in their first contact with the outside world since early May.

"Six of us made it to the summit on June 21 and we stayed there for over three hours," said David Hamhly. 36, an aeronautical engineer from Seattle and deputy leader of the expedition.

Role as Agent-Provocateur in Alabama Bombing Alleged

An FBI Informant Suspected in Civil Rights Killings

By Howell Raines

ATLANTA, July 9 (NYT) — A renewed investigation by Alahama authorities into murders during the 1960s civil rights movement has in-dicated that the FBI's chief paid informant in the Ku Klux Klan might have been an agent-provocateur who participated in and helped plan the incidents that the FBI hired him to monitor.

The informant, Gary Rowe Jr., has failed two polygraph tests in which he denied involvement in the 1963 bombing that killed four black children at the 16th Street Baptist Church in Birmingham, ac-cording to records compiled by the Alabama attorney general's staff and Birmingham police.

Because of his answers on the polygraph tests, Mr. Rowe is suspecied of having been in the group of Klansmen who planted dyna-mite at the church before dawn on Sept. 15, 1963.

Deception Alleged

The reports of the polygraph examiners also indicated that Mr. Rowe was "attempting deception" in denying involvement in the fire-bombing of the home of A.G. Gas-ton, a hlack millionaire in Birmingham, and in setting off shrapnel bombs that, investigators said, were intended to maim passersby in a black neighborhood.

Mr. Rowe also is quoted in investigative files as having made in-criminating statements in the presence of two Birmingham policemen about his role in the killing of Viola Liuzzo, a civil rights demonstrator who was shot to death near Selma

A spokesman for the FB1 said yesterday that the agency had "no comment" about allegations that Mr. Rowe had provoked violence while employed by the bureau, Mr. Rowe's attorney could not be reached for comment.

The Liuzzo case brought Mr. Rowe, a former nightelub bouncer, national attention in 1965 when his testimony, under FBI protection and a grant of immunity from state and federal prosecutors, sent three Birmingham Klansmen to prison.

In 1975, wearing a hood to protect the new identity he assumed with the help of the FBI, Mr. Rowe told the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence Operations that the hureau had encouraged him to participate in acts of violence as part of his undercover work within the Klan. Shortly thereafter, Alahama authorities contacted him in the hope that he might become a prosecution witness in their renewed investigation of the 1963 church

But after two polygraph tests and six hours of interrogation, state investigators and Birmingham detectives now contend that Mr. Rowe may have been with Robert Chambliss in the car that delivered the bomb to the 16th Street Baptist Church. At the least, the investigators believe, Mr. Rowe prohably had prior knowledge that the bomb had been planted and failed to re-Massachusetts rests with the Legis - court also cited Judge Bonin's ac- port it in time to save the four young girls who died when it went off during Sunday services.

Official Theory

Chambliss, 74, was convicted of first-degree murder and sentenced to life in prison last November for the bombing.

State investigators have suggested a different theory to explain the "deception" indicated by the polygraph tests and the "vital informa-tion" Mr. Rowe is suspected of withholding. Mr. Rowe, it is said. may have thought the bomb was supposed to go off around 4 a.m., hefore anyone came to the church

The FBI files, in fact, record a call from Mr. Rowe to an agent in Birmingham that Sunday morning in which Mr. Rowe asked if anyone had heard a bomb go_off about daylight. Not long after Rowe hung up, the bomh at the 16th Street Church exploded. Mr. Rowe now denies having made the call.

"My best estimate was that he knew in advance it was happen-ing." said one investigator. "He thought it was going off at 4 a.m., but it went off and killed those kids, and then be can't come forward. How's he going to admit that ite knew they were going to put a bomb out and then didn't tell? If he didn't help — if he just had prior knowledge — he's still got a prob-lem. I don't believe the FBI would have given him immunity."

tn any event, state investigators have not ruled out the possibility that Mr. Rowe may have been with Chambliss at the church.

Provocation for Money

Ironically, the picture of Mr. Rowe being developed by the investigators seems to support the contentions of Klan leaders that Mr. Rowe purposely led Klansmen into violence so that he would have information to sell the FBl.

There have been news reports that Mr. Rowe — who testified that almost one-third of his 1964 in-come of $5,600 came from the FBI was employed under a federalinformant program in which participants were paid according to the volume and quality of information they supplied. For five years, he received monthly payments of $20 to $300 from the FBI.

Investigative reports on a "dou-ble bombing involving shrapnel" that took place 10 days after the 16th Baptist Street Church bombing have caused investigators to place some value on charges that Mr. Rowe may have helped stage the incident that he reported for

The Birmingham police spotted Mr. Rowe only four blocks from the scene of the two explosions. FBI records state that he telelphoned in his report in the few minutes hetween the first and second explosions, and a polygraph examiner concluded that there was deception in Mr. Rowe's denial that he was directly involved.

Mr. Rowe's testimony in the Liuzzo case has also raised ques-

VIENNA (NYT) - Only a city fascinated by its past and forever looking backward would go out of its way — and tie up traffic — to celebrate the 75th anniversary of its municipal streetcar system.

But, just this one time, Vienna might be looking to the future when it glorifies the virtues of its beloved tramway. The Viennese use the English word and pronounce it

"I am a firm believer in a renaissance of the streetcar," said Mayor Leopold Gratz. "It is one of the means of transport friendliest to the environment, it can accommodate twice as many passengers as a bus, and it can stop on every other block, which a subway can't."

The mayor, a popular Social Democrat, and his aides think that in the next 25 years, other big cities will return to the streetcar. ed : Vienna's tramway is slow. The jes.

Most of today's streetcars have automatic ticket dispensers so that the city can bold down its payroll. Experts Suspect a 10th Planet Beyond Pluto NEW YORK, July 9 (NYT) -

The discovery of a moon in orbit around Pluto, the outermost known planet in the solar system, has increased the suspicion that one or more huge objects, perhaps even a planet may remain to be discovered beyond Pluto's orbit. The discovery was made after close scruti-ny of photographic plates of the planet by the U.S. Naval Observa-

Pluto, which was discovered in 1930. is about 2.8 billion miles from earth. By comparison, the sun is only about 93 million miles away. Because of its enormous distance and relatively small size. Pluto is extremely difficult to observe, even with the most modern tele-scopes, and the discovery of a satellite of the planet bas been hailed as a major astronomical achievement.

The discovery was credited to James Christy, who spotted the moon June 22 while making routine measurements of photographs tak-en of Pluto in April and May by the observatory's 61-inch astrometric reflecting telescope at Flagstaff, Ariz.

Elongated Image

"I noticed immediately that the Induced infinediately that the image of Pluto was elongated," Mr. Christy said, "and that often means that something is wrong with observing conditions or the plate. But in this case, the images of the stars near Pluto were normal.

"During the course of the day, I studied 18 images of the planet on our new plates, and they all showed the anomaly. At first I wasn't sure, but by the end of the day I was confident that we were looking at a satellite of Pluto."

The observatory then recbecked photographs of Pluto that it made in 1965 and 1970, and the astronomers found the same anomaly in the older pictures — an apparent north-south elongation of the plan-

The Naval Observatory asked the Cerro Tololo Interamerican Observatory at La Serena, Chile, to help in confirming the find. The Cerro Tololo astronomers turned their powerful 158-inch telescope on Pluto and confirmed Friday that the Naval Observatory had indeed found a Pluto satellite.

BMW enjoyed another record year in 1977. Both in Germany and abroad the Company's progressive model range attracted an ever greater following. More than 288,000 cars and around 31,000 motorcycles were sold around the world.

New six-cylinder range

In 1977 BMW launched its new generation of six-cylinder engines and introduced the 7-series luxury sedans. These developments further stimulated the already strong sales demand.

Renewed high investment. 3,500 new jobs.

During the year under review, BMW invested a record DM 335 million primarily in new product development, expansion of plant capacity in line with overall demand and rationalization programs. These investments were largely financed from own resources. As in the past no short-term borrowing was necessary. The added facilities guarantee the necessary higher unit output without orienting production on peak demand. At home and abroad BMW now employs 37,581. In 1977, 3,551 new jobs were created.

Record performance in all major markets

BMW's own distribution network contributed greatly to the remarkable sales performance in all major export markets with main emphasis on the US, EEC countries, Switzerland and Austria. In the US, gross Dollar sales grew by 35% due to increased sales of the large six-cylinder models and generalparts revenues. Unit sales registered a 12% gain in the United States. Overall exports advanced by 3.5%. These results were achieved despite the unabated strength of the DM against major currencies as well as strong demand which could not be fully met.

Of this amount DM 60 million was used to further strengthen the Company's financial reserves and DM 65 million was distributed to shareholders.

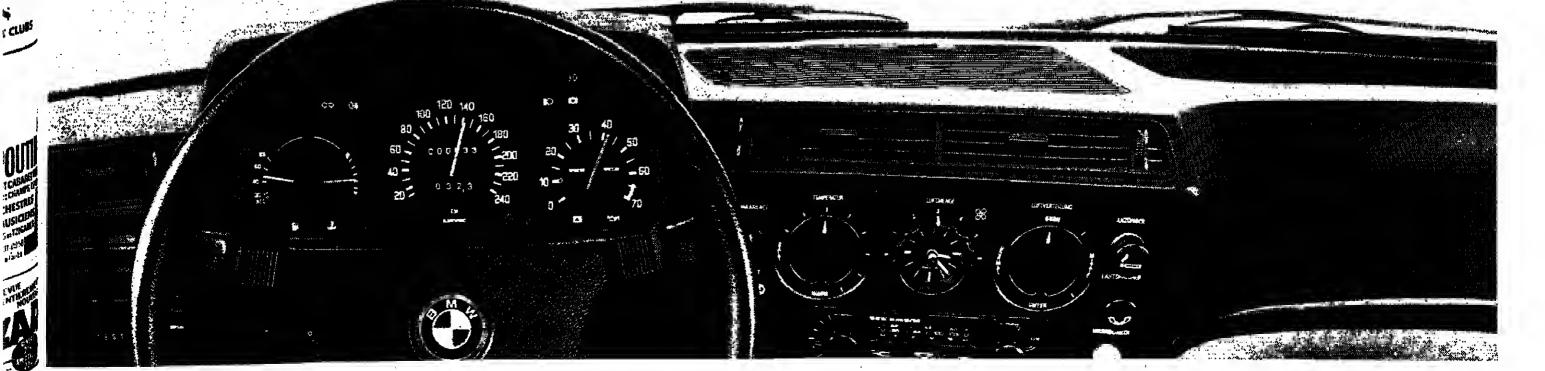

Looking ahead

1978 got underway with the highest product demand in BMW's history. However, BMW will continue to contain its overall growth in order to further strengthen the Company's basic financial and corporate structure.

In this connection a further increase in capital of DM 104 million has been authorized at this year's annual general meeting, total funds available from this operation will amount to approx.DM 150 million.

The treason trial of Anatoli Shcharansky opening today in Moscow will tell wbether the current cloud over Soviet-U.S. relations will continue to darken or start to clear. It is startling, and accidental, that such large stakes should have settled on this one case. but it is so. The matter is, moreover, entirely Moscow's to decide.

Mr. Shcharansky, who has been held incommunicado for 16 months, is hardly responsible for the timing of his trial. Behind that, one assumes, is a calculated Soviet decision to throw President Carter's humanrights interventions back in bis teeth at what may well he a make-or-break moment in such crucial East-West negotiations as the strategic arms talks.

But Mr. Shcharansky is. at close inspection, not an unlikely figure to be at the heart of this East-West encounter. As a Jew kept from emigrating, he touches what is, year in and year out, perhaps the most emotion-laden and politically freighted aspect of the human-rights cause. As a key memher of the unofficial group formed to monitor Russia's compliance with its human-rights pledges at Helsinki, he figures in yet another bead-on East-West collision. As a computer programmer with wide scientific contacts, he has an involvement with the exceedingly delicate area of the transfer of science and technology between East and West. As a defendant whose innocence of ClA connections President Carter has personally vowed, he becomes a figure whose treatment affects the prestige and credibility of the White House.

It is his scientific connection, by the way, that seems to have provided the basis for his heing charged with "high treason in the form of espionage." The particulars of this charge have not yet been made public. But were it not for his scientific links, Mr. Sbcharansky presumably would bave been charged only with anti-Soviet propaganda. This is the charge against a second prominent Jewish dissident, Alexander, Ginsburg, whose trial is also to open today - separately, in Kaluga.

In a country Ihat treated its citizens with respect, and under a government truly interested in pursuing detente. Mr. Shcharansky, and for that matter, Mr. Ginsburg, would not be facing trial at all. To that considerable extent, a great deal of damage has already been done. The Soviet regime still has it within its power, however, to limit further damage. It can expedite both trials and run them in a businesslike rather than a theatrical way. It can minimize the aspect of a Shcharansky connection with the ClA and keep the trial away from President Carter. Most important, it can render a humane sentence - the maximum sentence for treason is death.

One can never say in Soviet-U.S. relations that "everything" hangs in the balance of one event. Still, it is hard to exaggerate what hangs on the Sbcharansky trial. Saturday, the cancellation of a high-level science and technology mission to Moscow - a mission meant to balance a similar one to Peking was disclosed, along with an administration decision to review all other cooperative agreements with Moscow. Considerations of conscience and politics could yet make it impossible for Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to meet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko for the strategic arms control talks scheduled in Geneva on Wednesday. Mr. Vance personally denounced the trials Saturday.

The Soviet Union cannot he expected to stand still and say thank you when President Carter personally involves himself in particular human-rights cases in the Soviet Union. But it also cannot expect to trample wantonly on pledges and values it professes to uphold, and still enjoy the full benefits of cooperation with foreign states. The Shcharansky trial puts the whole immediate future of Soviet-U.S. relations in the Kremlin's bands.

Speaking for the majority. Jus-tice Stevens emphasized that broadcasting - a uniquely pervasive presence" that is "uniquely accessible 10 children" — has the most limited First Amendment

But Stevens notes that, "invalidating any rule on the hasis of its bypothetical application to situations not before the court is 'strong medicine.' He added: "We decline to adminster that medicine to preserve the vigor of patently offensive sexual and excretory speech." As Stevens says, such speech surely lies "at the peripbery of First Amendment concern."

A 'Hierarchy'

Stevens' idea that there is a "periphery" of First Amendment concern, and the related idea that laws regulating speech can make distinctions based on the content of speech, detonated Brennan.

Stevens insists that there is a "hierarchy of First Amendment values" by which to judge the "so-cial value" of speech. But he also insists that "government must re-main neutral in the marketplace of ideas." an idea incompatible with a "hierarchy of First Amendment values." It also is incompatible with many other things, such as the con-stitutional guarantee of a "republi-can form of government," a guarantee which commits the govern-ment to the nurturing of a particular political and social cul-

Stevens believes government can regulate indecent utterances when they are not "essential" to the "ex-position of ideas" and when "any benefit that may be derived from them is clearly outweighted by the social interest in order and morali-

Sievens could not avoid getting into deep philosophic water in a case about regulation of speech. Once in that water, be endorsed a sound theory that deserves more careful expression than he has

Brennan ridicules the justices for their fragile sensibilities. But be does not express the theory that evidently underlies his dissent.

Brennan says that the language of Carlin's satire "may be the very stuff of everyday conversation in some, if not many, of the innumerable subcultures that comprise this nation." His citations of "academic research" show that the subcultures he has in mind include inner-city hlacks and "young radicals."

Brennan's (and Carlin's) point seems to be that the concept of "indecent" language derives from society's conventions of decency: such conventions express only the preferences of the majority; all preferences are mere matters of taste: all tastes are equally idiosyncratic; so conventions sustained by law are irrational and indefensible forms of majoritarian tyranny.

Those of us who disagree are, I sather, apt to be charged with acute ethnocentric myopia."

DUBLIN (NYT) — This is a city in a state of siege. In a war between the promoters of speculative construction and the protectors of the city's heritage, battles are being fought on both sides of the Liffey, from Hume Street to Mountjoy Square, with skirmishes in the most fashionable neighbor-

The battle scars are the broken fanlights and window-glass of wrecked rows of 18th-century bouses and the deteriorating historic buildings on otherwise souod blocks. Derelict construction, started but oever finished, has left gapclassical beauty, and rubble-strewn lots are like bombed-out ruins.

The cause of the destruction is Dublin's economic growth, a badly needed prosperity that passed this city by io the 19th century, leaving it virtually intact as one of the great Georgian cities of the world. The result of the boom is a precipitous rise in land values and a wave of business construction competing for addresses in the best and most historic parts of town - a conditioo that is attracting speculators like the proverbial honey.

Records

Land-price records are broken almost daily. A recent figure of $176,000 an acre was the subject of a lead editorial in the Irish Times called "The New High-Priced

Because profits from the coover-sion of residential to commercial property in the center of Dublin can be 5 to 10 times what the present land use would yield, the incenrive for eviction, demolition and oew construction is far greater than for rehabilitation or preservation.

In addition to the deterioration being encouraged by purchasers in a gamble with percentages, the city is now pockmarked with so many projects begun and then aban-doned for lack of funds that an inventory of those eyesores has been requested by the Dublin City

Even with the accelerating destruction, Dublin remains a city of special charms. Although much of this appeal has been associated with its literary character, Dublin has unique architectural qualities. Continuous rows of homogeneous Georgian construction maintain an intimate human scale marked by singular style and grace. There are loog streets of four-story, k brick structures with arched, colonnaded doorways and delicate fanlight tracery surrounding donrs in a rainbow of colors. The interiors vie in the elegance of their Adam-style plaster details.

Dichotomy

These 18th and early 19th-century buildings often make up entire oeigh borboods or border landscaped squares, with vistas unmarred by 20th-century intrusions. Mountjoy Square, one of the most beautiful examples of this 18th-century urban genre, has been restored on one side and is in ruins on the other, where preservationists were unable to save a particularly distinguished stand of houses.

These battles are fought, and of-ten lost, by private organizations that include the Irish Georgian Society, the National Trust for Ireland and a local association called the Dublin Civil Group.

Looked on as clitist groups led by either a moneyed or an intellectual aristocracy — Desmond Guin-ness is the crusading head of the Irish Georgian Society, and a pas-sionately articulate history professor, Kevin Nowlan, leads the Dublin Civic Group — the preserva-tionists have been unable to command popular support.

The traditional Irish mistrust of wealth and privilege, born of centu-ries of poverty, has been carried over to a lack of interest in historic

A. — That's like saying that we are helping Israel because some of our oil, unbeknownst to us, may find its way to Israel via the U.S. The important thing is our official policy which was oot to support Mengistu. Unlike others, we cannot make today's friend tomorrow's enemy. Stad Barre was and continues to be our friend.

Q. — The U.S. recently suspended $400 million worth of sales to Libya, including spare parts for civilian aircraft, because it has sheltered international terrorists. European counterterrorist agencies say they have irrefutable evidence that Iraq and Southern Yemen have also given aid and comfort to these people. I can understand your helping Palestinian commandos but why are their European friends allowed to use your facilities and then participate in acts of terrorism in West Europe? A. — Regarding the Palestinians. and they are free to train and plan-here. On foreigners, however, we have a clear stand. We are not concerned with what happens in European countries, whether it's the Red Brigades or others. But we do oot allow our country to be a stag-ing or training area for these activities. We know that cerain Palestinians have trained some of these Europeans outside Iraq under mutual assistance arrangements. Perhaps some may have entered Iraq disguised as Palestinians. We doo't know but we would certainly appreciate any evidence European services possess so that we could follow through at our end. It would belp us to confront our Palestinian friends who deny that they have abused our hospitality this way. Q. — European services have found some airline tickets in "safe houses" used by European terrorists that were issued by "Baghdad Tours."

A. - I'm oot saying this couldn't happen. But I assure you it's not something done by any branch of the Iraqi government. Some individual may enter Iraq with forged documents and purchase airline rickets while here. But it's definitely not our policy.

Q. — Was the late Wadie Haddad, whose network is still active, operating independently in Iraq or under your control?

A. - Certain factions of the Palestinian resistance get our assistance without any interference in their aims and policies or the way they're carried out. The most we do is that when we see that their policies harm Iraq we tell them so and ask them to refrain from exploiting opportunities that reflect badly on us. Beyond that we cannot intervene in their internal affairs. Once we told Wadie Haddad that air-plane hijackings had begun to burt their cause. That was friendly advice, not an order. Q. — If we had normal diplnmatic relations and ambassadors in each other's capital's and direct access to you, couldn't many misperceptions about our respective policies he avoided?

A. - That is correct. But as you know there are other major issues — e.g., your complete support for the Zionist entity and your deliberate strategy of dividing the Arab world - that stand in the way of normal relations.

Q. — Is agreement or disagreement with another country's policies the criterion for diplomanic relations. A. — The lack of normal relations with the U.S. is, hopefully, a temporary case, no matter how

Q. — The Soviet Union endorses UN Resolution 242, as the U.S. does, and supports Israel's right to exist in its 1967 frontiers. Since you disagree with Moscow on this

A. - We have told the Soviets A. — We have told the Soviets very clearly wby we don't agree with them and why we think they're wrong. But don't forget that the Soviets supply the Arabs with arms while the U.S. rewards the Zionist aggressors. We do not wish to throw the Jews into the sea as our enemies charge, and would not even if we had the means to do so, which we will in the future, but the which we will in the future, but the Zionist enuty must and will be replaced by a greater Palestinian state. Would oormal relations with the U.S. change America's hostile policy? Even Arab countries that enjoy friendly relations with the U.S. haven't managed to change anything. The severing of relations is a rather dramatic way to convey

- His words have been noted with interest. But we are still wait-ing for deeds and that can only mean withdrawal from the occupied territories. If you tell the Zionist aggressor that it must change its position to conaggression, then we will begin to see change. Not only does Israel refuse to move, but we also see that Israel is much strooger than it was in 1973 and that some Arab countries have gone along with this strategy. Saudi Arabia, for example, has become an adjunct of U.S. policy in the area. It even speeds money in Africa to counter Soviet moves. It talks of its commitment to help Italy resist the Communists. It prevents oil prices from rising to compensate for the depreciation of the dollar, floods markets with oil beyond their needs, thus carrying nut orders from the U.S. energy agency. Despite all this, it has not managed to prevail upoo the Carter administration to compel the Israelis to withdraw from occupied lands. A. Georges Marchais [the French Communist Party leader] told me just the same thing in Paris. Decidedly, the West is a victim of tired clithes. The left in the West refuses to abandon the myth of socialism in the Soviet Union. The right still believes that Russia is profoundly conservative. Just look at its expansion in Africa, all carried out in the framework of what you call detente. Just look at what is left of the Helsinki accords, oow that onethird of it - that referring to human rights — has been done away with. Any country that can

A. I want you to understand. Tell me why President Carter has so quickly dropped his crusade for human rights. Why was there only one Western observer at the Orlov trial, a U.S. diplomat? Where were the other countries that signed the Helsinki agreement? CHICAGO, July 9 (AP) — The prospect of greater corn supplies produced selling on the Chicago Board of Trade during the holiday-shortened week that pared 1978 crop soybean futures by about 12 cents a husbel." Corn futures receded 31/2 to 4 cents, sinking to their lowest prices in two

Market observers said the losses were largely influenced by the weather, expecially considering the hefty rate of grain exports this seasoo and various federal programs designed to reduce supplies and, thus, boost

In fact, corn futures lost ground even though an all-time weekly record of 57.7 million bushels of that commodity was shipped overseas in the latest reporting period. But while corn and new-crop soybean futures remained under pressure, wheat and soynbean contracts for delivery before the autumn harvest scored sizable gains. Typically, wheat prices decline at harvest time because farmers sell more of their crops. But those futures surged 9% to 13% cents a bushel this week, leading some experts to theorize that free-market supplies might become relatively tight as a result of government loan and grain reserve In metals trading, gold benefited from an influx of buying during the final session, but silver futures managed only a small advance.

The dollar's performance on foreign-money markets dictated much of the activity in precious metals due to a seasonally sluggish demand. The weakness of the dollar and related economic woes deflated interest rate futures, as most deliveries sagged to life-of-contract lows at the close

Doubts Rising on Longevity of Expansion

New York Stock Market

By Vartanig G. Vartan

NEW YORK, July 9 (NYT) — Stock prices kept slipping last week under pressure of Wall Street's worries that interest rates will rise, inflatinn will remain stuhbornly high and the dollar may get a renewed hatter-ing in foreign-currency dealings.

There were price spurts in some of the casinn issues and in Canadian oil and gas issues, but the market as a whole seemed sluggish. The Dow Jones

They are finding them not only in the recent economic data, which indicate a slowing economy, hut also in the latest survey of consumer attitudes and intentions, which shows a growing degree of pessi-mism about the economy and how Washington is handling it.

All the leading samplers of con-sumer sentiment have found that confidence plummeted in recent months, mostly because of ever-ris-ing inflation. And a late-June nationwide poll by The New York Times and CBS News indicated that 58 percent of the public thought the economy was getting worse, while only 9 percent thought it was improving. President Carter was also given very low marks in the poll of his handling of the econ-

But ironically, two other surveys show that husiness confidence in the economy gained in the face of the contrary trend in the consumer and public sectors, and in the face of numerous economic and political differences that the husiness community has with the administration and with Congress.

The nnly unsettling aspect nn the economic scene three months ago was the U.S. international trade performance, which showed huge deficits month after month, a deteriorating value for the dollar in relating to other major currencies, and rising tensings between this country and its Western partner over oil imports, protectionism and other economic issues.

During the last few months, however, there have been several developments that may be harhingers of hange: The barsh winter, the long coal strike, the expensive wave set-tlement for the miners, the explosion of credit demand both by public and husiness, the decline in pro-ductivity and the steady rise in unit-labor costs.

If husinessmen were asked to rate the administration's handling nf economic issues, there is little doubt that the grading would be quite low. They have faulted the administration on a number of its positions — on government spending, the size of the federal deficits, energy policy, defense of the dollar, the voluntary-restraining program, the increase in the minimum wage and in social-security taxes, and its reluctance to push for stronger tax incentives to prod husiness invest-

BETTER TIMES THAN THESE By Winston Groom, Sunantt, 411 pp. $10.95

Let ME enthuse. I didn't think, novel." This has the effect of scalling Groom's Victoam exactly to the Than These," that a conventional reader's imagination, which, if it war story could do justice to Vietnam. I thought the nightmare of that unprecedented military experience - unprecedented for Americans, at any rate - would demand an innovative form of fiction to convey its peculiar horror — a dream form of narrative lying somewhere beyond the black absurdity of "Catch-22."

But Winston Groom's tragicomic first novel proves this assumption incorrect. For he has marshaled the familiar conventions of American war fiction - a cast of characters includes everyone from the dumh Southern form boy to the thoughtful Jewish officer, to the Queeg-like battalioo commander: jungle-fighting set-pieces that we've known sloce "The Naked and the Dead" (there are even a case of snakebite and an ottack hy a swarm of bees), and the fall from o sense of glnry to distilusion that Philip Caputo caught so well in "A Ru-mor of War." And Groom has fashioned them into a mirror of hell that leaves one nwe-struck.

How has he managed this? For one thing, he establishes his large cast of characters so firmly to the reader's mind that one hardly oceds to consult the "Table of Or-gaoization and Roster" that is included. We grow attached to the men of Bravo Company, Fourth Battalion, Seventh Cavalry, be-cause we meet them first as they are emharking a troop ship in San Francisco, and we travel with them to Cam Raho Bay on a voyage that includes as many dramatic and amusing incideous as does any sea passage worth its salt.

For another thing, Groom creates an imaginary, symbolic, Viet-nam within the borders of the real thing. As he writes in his iotroductory note: "Some of the terraio has been altered and military history rewritten to suit the story line. For instance, there is in fact an la Drang Valley, but most of the battles there took place a year before this tale is told. There are no such places in the la Drang as the Boo Hoo Forest or The Fake, and while there were several Monkey Mountains and Happy Valleys in Vietnam, none that I know of were located where they are put in this

ing Groom's Vietoam exactly to the reader's imagination, which, if it should fail him nevertheless, he can augment by consulting the map of Bravo Company's area of npergtions that is printed on the novel's endpapers. Finally, the events of "Better. Times Than These" constitute of miniature history of the real war, Inthe four parts into which the novel is divided, there is every sort of combat that Vietnam had to offer as well as a Tet offensive, a Huetype massacre, a My Lai incident, and a consequent court-manial episode. There are several "Tuming. Points in the War" and the case of an officer announcing that women, and children burn like anything else, which recalls any number of similarly outrageous pronounce-

Naturally, these events recall our reactions to the incidents that inspired them, but they are arranged and refined not to provoke us, but in heighten our understanding.

Actually, it isn't entirely fair to call "Better Times Than These" a conventional war novel. Looking back over some of its more power. ful moments, I find myself thinking of Bac, a one-legged Vietnamese peasant who keeps showing up to hoodwink the American soldiers. hoodwink the American soldiers, and eventually turns out to be a leader of the Vietcong forces. I think of the mysterious Happy Valley, whose idyllic beauty and peacefulness makes all the more frightening what it holds in store for the patrol assigned to map its terrain. I think of Battalion Commander Patch with his Custer-like mustache and his talk of driving the Indians. and his talk of driving the Indians on to reservations, of the rock fight between the mad Lt. Brill and the Vietnamese children, of the ad-vance of an enure hamlet, women and children jocluded, to overrun a key American position, and of Pvi. Homer Crump's pet monkey, the banana-cat, that survives its master's death to bare its teeth at the officer indirectly responsible for Bravo Company's destruction.

These fragments are not realistic, of course, they are super realistic verging on hallucination, just as the effect of some of the more conventional scenes — for instance, an of-ficer writing his answer to a "Dear John" letter from a stateside war protestor just before going into his final battle — verge on propagan-da. But neither the hallacinators. nor the paypagandistic in "Better Times" could have been written by unyone who didn't understand Vietnam to the bloody bone, Finally, what matters most in the book is. the author's profound apprehension of the moral issues. If you still think there were obvious solutions to these, then read Groom's noveland weep.

Borg Crushes Connors For Title at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England, July 9 (NYT) — Yes. Biorn Borg looked invincible yesterday en route to a 6-2. 6-2. 6-3 rout of Jimmy Connors and a third consecutive Wimbledon singles title. And perhaps it is time to find a spot for this marvelously gifted 22-year-old professional on the all-time tennis ladder.

Fred Perry, the first player to have won three straight Wimbledon crowns 42 years ago, was the first person other than Connors to shake Borg's hand at center court after his I-hour 48-minute execunews conference, the 69-year-old Perry put Borg in a class with Jack Kramer, Lew Hoad, Pancho Gonzales and Ellsworth Vines. That is top 10 company on any list.

Perry said. "If he had fallen out of a 45-story window in a New York skyscraper, he would have gone straight up.

The Best Ever

Even Lennart Bergelin, Borg's long-time Swedish coach, could hardly restrain himself yesterday. Borg had played better in a few little matches, Bergelin said, "but this is the best big match he ever played." But that has become the essence of Borg: the bigger the ehallenge, the better he responds.

Bad Officials, Ashe Says, Remain the Big Problem By Arthur Ashe

LONDON, July 9 (WP) — Like partly the inability — or cowardlities Shakespearean villain Iago, Ilie ness — of amateur officials to firmly and fairly deal with Nastase that heavy, suspended last week from Grand Prix tennis events for three months and fined $5,000 for breaches of the Men's International Professional Tennis Council's code

Officiating remains the one maor problem most progressive tennis Jayers have not come to grips with. For years there have been nunerous internal struggles for con-rol of the players: scheduling, telerision and the circuit in general. Players Use It

More often than not players will take advantage of any loophole in the rules, any weak umpire or vacillating lines person. There is also the matter of amateur officials making decisions and determining the fate of professional athletes.

The new professional referees will be expected to close the loopholes, make sure chair umpires are competent and weed out the inefficient among tennis umpires and lines persons. The most embarrassing situation in pro tennis is a lines person watching a ball go by and not mak-ing a call because he or she did not see the shot. Imagine Lou Brock stealing second and the second base umpire refusing to make a call, saying he did not see the play. Borg's run clearly has carried him past Connors as the sport's dominant player. After holding a physical and mental grip over his younger rival several years ago, the 25-year-old Connors now has lost five of six matches and won only 11 games in the six sets.

Their role reversal has become even more evident on the court. Once, it was Connors throwing the aggressive punches and boring in for the killer volleys, with Borg counter-punching from the backcourt. Yesterday, Borg was serving so much thunder and light-ning that he broke strings on two different racquets and had the racquet fly out of his hand while be was serving at 2-3, 40-0 in the third

But that was about the only time that Borg lost control, even though he acknowledged afterward that when I saw a good chance to win it, I got ught.

No Physical Problems

Both players were physically fit for this final, in contrast to last year when Connors played with a fractured right thumb (Borg won in five sets) and their Grand Prix Masters final in January when Borg was weak with a virus (Connors won in three sets).

However, their mental attitudes clearly differed yesterday, and here is where Borg rivals Laver and Kramer for toughness and tem-perament. He had said the match was the biggest of his career - ' played that way. Connors, an evenmoney choice among British bookmakers, would not say he was in a daze but admitted afterward, "Mentally. I never got into the serve from a rifle to a cannon. He managed 49 of 88 first serves yesterday — or a respectable 56 percent — served five aces, six service winners and induced 13 return errors. Thus, 24 of the 88 points on Borg's serve, or one in four, were decided by only two strokes.

In Early Trouble

Connors knew he did not serve well. "It took a day off," be quipped. The inability to make Borg respect his serve left the second seed in trouble from the start. The key game of the match and an example of Borg's service potential — was the fourth game. Connors held triple break point at 0-40 that would have gotten him back to 2-all. But he netted a backhand return, Borg smashed to 30-40 and then hit a service winner with such force that Connors's attemptreturn flew straight up.

"To beat Jimmy, you bave to serve well," Borg said. "Today 1 was serving well."

In retrospect, Connors said per-haps he should have been more ag-gressive "instead of pooping the ball." But Borg never allowed Connors to develop a groove by chang-ing the pace of rallics, rushing the net off sliced backhand crosscourts into Connors's forehand and returning serves almost flawlessly.

Borg made only four service return errors in the match and forced Connors to dig out the low bounces on the soft grass courts of the All England Lawn Tennis Club. With Connors serving at 3-5, 30-all, Borg rushed the net and reached match point on a backhand drop volley

Court in Milan Bans Transfers By Soccer Clubs

MILAN, July 7 (UPI) — A Milan magistrate has banned all Italian soccer clubs from negoti-ating transfers of soccer players among themselves on the grounds that such deals violated workers' rights.

Magistrate Giancarlo Costa-

gliola sent dozens of policemen

Friday to the Milan hotel where end-of-season transfer negotia-tions were being held to notify all participants of his order. Earlier last week, Costagliola ordered the hotel raided and piles of documents seized at the request of Sergio Campana, president of the Italian soccer players' association.

Campana told the magistrate that intermediaries were taking part in the negotiations in violation of labor laws that prohibit any private involvement in the hiring of workers.

Costagliola ruled not only that is it wrong for intermediaries to make a profit from employment contracts but also that the clubs themselves have no right to profit by selling players under contract to them. He ruled players should negotiate directly with clubs that want to hire them.

The soccer league held an emergency meeting following the court order but had no pub-

NEW YORK — Your guest co-lumnist today is television's have to deal with a subject as dull popular Doctor Magneto, author of as heat.
"Plain Talk About Science."
The The scientific fact, however, is

Let's talk plain about heat. Every July people write me and say. "Doctor Magneto, what is this heat thing that makes me so miserable day and night?" It is a natural question. Before answering it. however, let me try to dispel the wides read fear that heat is too complicated for anyone but a scientific genius to understand. The truth is that heat is no harder to understand than water. Understand water." I always tell my students, "and you are halfway 10 understanding heat." Now what do we know about water?

Two things: Water is wet, and water runs downhill.

This explains why perspiration first makes your collar damp and then runs down your shoulder blades, instead of trickling up from the neck toward the top of your skull. Thus, we come to the first law of heat; to wit, on a bot day the shin will be wetter than the scalp.

From this, we can easily see the natural relationship between heat and water. Heat makes water. The water, you will have noticed. makes a mess of your clothes. Thus, we arrive at one of the basic char-acteristics of heat: Heat is hard on The s vour wardrobe. This explains why people with-out much money to buy clothes ei-ther go around undressed in the presence of beat or look like a mess a few hours after the heat arrives. Where does the heat come from? In this part of the world, most of our beat is manufactured in the In July this heat flows directly to New York to make water and ruin clothes. There is an old superstition that heat does this to New York to punish the city for its fiscal sloppi-

There have always been these old wives' tales to explain why heat travels all the way from the Gulf of Mexico to summer in New York. that heat is extraordinarily stupid. Its brain has been found to be too small to be measured. This means that it is even dumber than fish. which at least have sense enough to go to Cape Cod in July.

For this reason, the heat sits around New York all summer instead of going on to the Adiron-dacks or Nova Scotia where the

Why do so few New Yorkers repire of the heat? The explanation lies in the cunning of Mother Nature who designed perspiration as a way of keeping New Yorkers from a solution like the property of the lies. exploding like overheated boilers.

Perspiration is nothing more than a fancy, scientific word meaning "spiral through." It comes from the Latin words "per." meaning "through." and "spiro." meaning "spiral" "spiral.

Let's consider how this magnifi-cent invention protects New York-ers from disaster. The heat arrives from the Gulf of Mexico and pours into the human body. Instantly, a little thermostat signals danger. The body's pores open and the heat bottled up inside spirals through.

As it does, it turns to water on the skin, wets the collar and runs harmlessly down the shoulder blades to make a mess of the clothes. Many people bave written me. saying. "Doctor Magneto. why do I sweat so much when the heat

The scientific answer to this is that they do not sweat. Horses sweat. Human beings perspire. This has been scientifically demonstrat-ed by the fact that human beings who wish to stanch the flow of heat spiraling through their pores as water purchase anti-perspirants, oot anti-sweatants.

Former President Nixors, whose pores permitted the heat to spiral through freely, was scientifically diagnosed as a heavy perspirer, not a heavy sweater.

In scientific terms, a beavy sweater is a wool garment native to the north of England.

Scientific analysis shows that no heavy sweater has ever reached a position of power in government, although there have been many

N.Y. Miracle: A Non-Cheese Cheesecake

By Israel Shenker

NEW YORK (NYT) - Traditional Jews interpret the Bible as forbidding mear and dairy dishes at the same meal, but, instead of resting content with the wisdom of the sages. Ralph Goodman and Heinz Rohr wanted to do something about it. They own The Cake Stylists Inc. of New York city, and they dreamed of producing a cheesecake that was pareve neither meat nor dairy - and thus acceptable at any meal.

Several months ago, like a bolt from heaven, they got a call from n supplier offering a pareve, an imitation-cheese base. "My eyes lit up," Mr. Goodman said. When he tried making cheesecuke with the base, his eyes went dark again.

But Mr. Goodman and Mr. Rohr had kneaded enough dough to sink the Queen Elizabeth 2, so they persevered, tink-ening with the base, changing ingredients, braving heat and disappointment. Mornings became evenings, days turned into weeks; months disappeared. "First it came out too soft," said Horst Schumacher, the plant manager, "We couldn't get enough stability into it. The cakes fell as they came up and they fell as they went down. We tried whole eggs; we tried yolks; we tried texturized eggs; we tried

"It looked like a custard pie, and that we had to avoid under any circumstances," Mr. Rohr said. "It had to entice people. It had to look like a cheesecake.
"We added things, we eliminated things," Mr. Goodman recalled. "It was too thin, too thick, too heavy, too flat. A mil-lion and one things went wrong. The stuff we threw out here was unbelievable. I was sick of tast-

Then, on a day that seemed just like any other, Mr. Good-man took one more taste. "By Jove." he exclaimed, "we've got ing cheesecake."

He clamped a lid of secrecy that the Pentagon might envy— burglar alarms, security warn-ings and restricted access. Only four people received cheesecake clearances. They were the three developers and Mr. Goodman's son Michael, who has a master's degree in urban planning (and seems to be working toward a doctorate in kosher pastry). The other employees have been content not to pry, lest they become subject to suborning by foreign spies for by the Cheesecake Intelligence Agency?).

Bakery Patrol

To be sure that the product re-mains pareve and kosber, Rabbi Mosbe Weinberg patrols the bakery relentlessly. When ingredients arrive, he scans them carefully, alert for the slightest infraction. As cakes depart, he beams, satisfied that he has up-held divine law. When carefully screened visitors try to wheedle secrets out of the rabbi, his is the silence of the grave. "Don't mention names," Mr. Goodman

"I speak about kosher thiogs, not business." the rabbi responds. "As it says in Hebrew. a word to the wise is already

Such kosher caterers as Koumsky & Tuchman, Newman Leventhal, Victor Mayer, Majesuc and Jem have begun buying the cheesecake for their banquets. Gourmands who enjoy meat dishes and indigestion in perfect compliance with relig-ious law can now, with clear consciences, savor the added bliss of cheesecake for dessert. Some may find it hard to swallow rabbinical assurances that there is no cheese in the cheesecake, but they have the word not only of Rabbi Weinberg but of the entire Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, and the symbol — a U within an O an O - conveying that blessing.

"Some kosher caterers were afraid to put it on the table."
Mr. Rohr said. "The guests were suspicious. Some wouldn't touch the cheesecake, and some who did touch it wouldn't touch it again. They thought they'd al-ready committed one sin."

A Mystery

Abe Lebewohl of the Second Avenue Delicatessen in New York, offered the cake to himself night after night before offering it on bis menu and inviting others to share the miracle. "It's e breakthrough." cried one client.
"Like landing a man on the

"I can't figure out what's in it." said Blanche Schzer, "and I come from a family of bakers,"

Now a wholesale distributor is planning to sell the cake to retail outlets, and Mr. Goodman and Mr. Rohr are wondering how their staff will manage. They are already struggliog with a line rich in mammoth cakes surmounted by edible grooms, brides and even dolls with flounces. And all this is child's play alongside the artistic demands posed by the creation each week of more than 100 Torah-shaped cakes — Torahs open, Torahs closed — to say nothing of such pastry triumphs as the West Side Tennis Club of Forest Hills, the Goodyear blimp and — masterpiece of 20 years partnership — the Rego Park Jewish Center.

Having now outdone themselves, the miracle men are still at a loss for a name. "Pareve-Nu" seems too obscure, damning with faint praise. "We're not allowed to call it cheesecake even though it looks, tastes and smells like it." said Mr. Rohr.

"This one doesn't stick to your mouth, so I like it better than real cheesecake," said Mr.

"With ours you don't get a heavy lump in your stomach," Mr. Rohr said, "We were afraid it would have an aftertaste, I have to be honest: It still has a
